

Erin Brewster has finally lived in West Virginia longer than she lived in Virginia (where she grew up, attended college at Virginia Tech and law school at William and Mary), which doesn't make her a native, but since her parents are both McDowell County natives, she hopes to take credit for some of their time. She is a retired lawyer and also served as Deputy Commission of the Alcohol Beverage Control Administration under Governor Tomblin.

Even while practicing law Erin spent much of her spare time volunteering and when she stopped working following the onset of a medical condition, her life, and her volunteer efforts changed dramatically, which led to two of her most important volunteer efforts - she hosts a weekly talk radio show on WTSQ-LP, 88.1, Charleston, an all-volunteer, not-for-profit, independent station and part of her show each week focuses on non-profits and their upcoming activities. In addition, two and half years ago she and two others founded "The 100" a Charleston networking and giving group dedicated to making the Charleston area a better place to live and she has served as the group's Chair since its inception.

In addition, Erin serves as a co-chair for the West Virginia Symphony League/West Virginia Symphony Orchestra's Symphony Sunday and is also a past President of that organization and is the Sustainer Advisor for the Junior League of Charleston after years of active membership. She has served on the boards of the Children Therapy Clinic, Daymark, the West Virginia Symphony Orchestra, the West Virginia International Film Festival and other organizations. She is married to attorney Scott Kaminski and they and their dogs Sidney Marie, Geno and Cutch (all named after Pittsburgh athletes) reside in Charleston.
